MISSION & ATTENDANCE

ARLI seeks to improve skills governance and provision of labour market intelligence at European, national, regional and local levels, enhancing the involved stakeholders' ability to anticipate skills supply and demand.

An Agenda for New Skills and Jobs prioritizes equipping people with the right skills for employment. To improve transparency for jobseekers, workers, companies and public institutions, the European Commission has established the EU Skills Panorama. It collects data and analyses on current and future skills supply and labour market needs. So far, the EU Skills Panorama has focused on data and intelligence at national and sectorial levels. However, much excellent skills and labour market intelligence already exists at regional and local level within the EU Member States.

ARLI explores how existing regional and local provision of labour market intelligence can be enhanced for stakeholders through interrelation with the EU Skills Panorama.

Attendance and lunch will be free of charge.
